Water board OKs Phase III of rationing plan

By NANCY HILLS

IT APPEARS that even raining cats and dogs won't stave off the peninsula's water woes, with rationing slated for the new year.

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board this week approved (4-2) a water rationing ordinance that paves the way for rationing Jan. 1.

The ordinance, Phase III of a four-phased water waste/rationing plan, requires both residential and commercial water users to reduce water consumption by 20 percent.

'I don't know whether the board recognizes it or not, but by not establishing a moratorium, it is sending a signal to existing residents and to potential new residents that our water situation is not all that serious. Is this the kind of signal that is appropriate for a water emergency?'
— Dale Hekhuis

In response to concerns expressed by the public, the board directed its staff to review reducing the 4 percent surcharge on the water bill mandated by the ordinance to pay for the program.

The ordinance will receive its second review in December and, if adopted, the provisions will become law Jan. 1.

However, to activate the law and institute rationing, the board must approve a resolution declaring rationing to be in effect. Currently, the staff is planning to present the resolution for approval in December.

Andrew Bell, district engineer, informed the board that the peninsula would need to get about 7,000 acre feet of runoff before Jan. 1 for the staff to feel rationing is unnecessary.

Since even with a normal year of rainfall the peninsula produces only about 3,000 acre feet of runoff, the chances of getting 7,000 acre feet are highly unlikely, if not virtually impossible.

A higher runoff is especially unlikely with the ground as dry as it is now after two critically dry years.

The heart of the ordinance asks residents and businesses to reduce water consumption by 20 percent less than they used between Oct. 1, 1987 to Sept. 30, 1988.

If a resident is unable to reduce water consumption by 20 percent — he or she might always have been a frugal user — then the district will apply a per-person ration.

According to the per-person, or per-capita, allotment:

- A detached home with more than one person will be allowed 82 gallons per day for each resident.
- Apartment and condominium dwellers will receive 46 gallons per person per day if more than one person lives there.
- In a single detached house with one resident, the ration is 122 gallons per day.
- In an apartment or condominium with one person, it is 68 gallons per day.

The district will determine the number of people in a household by sending out a postcard survey to all residents.

The district allowed 50 percent more water for people living alone because landscaping and household needs remain approximately the same for multi-person households and single-person households.

Commercial enterprises will have to reduce their water bills by 20 percent, but do have the option of requesting a lifeline rate. The commercial lifeline rate is based on a 20-percent reduction of the average use for the type of business.

DIRECTORS DICK Heuer and Karin Strasser Kauffman (5th District supervisor), voted against the ordinance, both citing slightly different reasons for their decisions.

Heuer, who said he is in favor of rationing, has steadfastly objected to the 20-percent reduction, stating that it is not enough. He prefers the original plan of a 25-percent cutback.

"This is too little, too late," he said after the meeting.

Heuer also wanted a maximum amount of water use for residential users to control chronic water wasters. He pointed out, as did former boardmember Patricia Bernardi in her comments to the board, that a home could waste water and easily reduce usage by 20 percent from last year's bill. The 20-percent reduction does not necessarily mean the family is conserving water.

A cap on how much the family or person could use would bring that under some control, he said, though he recognized it would be a difficult program to administer.

Strasser Kauffman stated "My concerns have not been addressed on how we tackle high water users."

If there is no provision for large water users, there will not be "good compliance" from the public, she said.

Strasser Kauffman also objected to the lifeline rate for hotels versus residents, which gives hotels a per capita standard of 57 gallons per hotel room and residential apartments 46 gallons per person.

But Director Paul Davis spoke for the majority of the boardmembers when he said that, though it was not perfect, the board has "spent a lot time on this and I'm happy with the form it is in."

THE MEETING was conducted in the Steinbeck Forum in the Monterey Conference Center to accommodate the number of people the district believed would want to speak on the issue of rationing.

Speakers from the public at the meeting addressed a variety of issues, many focusing their objections on the 4 percent user fee.

Many objected to a projected cost of $500,000 to implement the program and particularly a $195,000 allotment of that money for "education."

Most of those who protested that fee said they believed that education is needed for a voluntary program, but a law will get plenty of free coverage and enforcement.

"Once compulsory rationing goes into effect, however, and presumably all consumers receive a printed notice of the conditions and penalties along with their water bill, the need for education will decrease," said Robert Greenwood of Carmel Valley.

"That 33 cents per gallon is, in itself, quite educational," he added, referring to the 33-cent daily penalty for each gallon over a water user's ration.

TYLER PERKINS, 3, of Carmel gets an apple from his post office pal Manny Darby during one of little Tyler's daily trips to the Carmel Post Office with his mother. According to his mom Tyler's been coming to the post office for the past six months with her and always has a cheery "Hi Manny!" when he enters and spots his buddy. Insane progress

Dear Editor:

So several letters have been written and received to the officials working on the Hatton Canyon project; however, one point has yet to be answered.

How can it be said that the environment is being taken into consideration when thousands of tons of concrete will be poured into such an ecologically sensitive area? It is quite a contradiction. Everyday, in one way or another, we as a world community, hear the environment is being permanently destroyed. Why is it that we must continue?

The environment gives us everything we need to survive as a planet and people, yet, in the name of "progress" we bulldoze right through. What kind of future is that for the children? If we are really truthful to ourselves and the world we will stop this insane progress.

Unseemly spectacle

Dear Editor:

The development of the beautiful beach walkway was made possible by the splendid leadership provided by Mayor Jean Grace when she was the chairwoman of the Carmel Beach Restoration Task Force.

She had the help of many others. I think particularly of David Shonman and Greg D'Ambrosio. I saw them frequently in the pre-construction phase as they made measurements and drew stripes to delineate the shape and course of the walkway. They hand-selected the stones which line the walkway. The walkway with its splendid

Don't toy with us

A LITTLE technology can be a good thing, but in the case of the $26 million Hatton Canyon Freeway project we believe that Caltrans resembles a child playing with a new Erector set on Christmas Day.

We take no issue with the fact that there surely needs to be a resolution to the ongoing traffic snarls along Highway 1. The question is: Does the road have to be a monumental engineering feat? — why can't we just have a freeway that works and answers the concerns of the local citizenry?

Forget the state-of-the-art interchange planned for Carmel Valley Road, where a driver would need a separate map just to navigate the proposed turns, dips, stops and flashing lights. Toss out a freeway that jettisons drivers toward Big Sur at an excess of 55 mph.

While you're at it, include an at-grade intersection at Rio Road — if Caltrans can design a Star Wars configuration at Carmel Valley Road, it can certainly come up with a safe plan for the entrance to a significant business area at the mouth of the valley. Nearby neighbors are also not too thrilled about living in the shadow of a huge freeway.

The bottom line is this: the Hatton Canyon Freeway needs to provide a safe, convenient route, while leaving the Carmel area aesthetically intact.

Carmel Planning Director Diane White hit the nail on the head last week when she criticized Caltrans for being more interested in traffic counts than preserving the peninsula's way of life.

Long after the Hatton Canyon Freeway is completed Caltrans officials will be gone, but their monument will remain.

Caltrans is not the only one dragging its heels — local legislators are also playing hard-to-get when it comes to providing straight answers to complicated questions.

Let's face it, most laypeople merely know what they want when it comes to the Hatton Canyon Freeway. Just get something done. Let the experts figure out a way to carry out the will of the people.

This is where the elected officials should come to the rescue — and where are they?

Thus far we have heard Sen. Henry Mello pop up at election time to use the scare tactic of loss of funding if the road is not soon completed. There is no evidence that, at this point, the funding is going anywhere but to the Hatton Canyon Freeway project.

Assemblyman Sam Farr worked tenaciously with a local committee, and even came up with some alternate designs for the road, until a few months ago when he seemingly threw up his hands in disgust at Caltrans' intransigence.

Usually ecologically minded 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kaufman has also taken the mistaken belief that Caltrans' current plan is the best solution for Monterey County.

Upon further examination, however, it appears certain that Carmel Valley Road and Carmel Rancho Boulevard will see an additional traffic crunch if the freeway continues as planned.

In other words, traffic coming from the north will take the intersection at Carmel Valley Road to Carmel Rancho Boulevard in order to get to business areas at the mouth of the valley. Currently those cars have the option of turning left at either Carmel Valley Road or Rio Road.

The only other way to get to mouth of the valley with Caltrans' proposed design is to go down the freeway almost to the Carmel River, turn right, go to the old Highway 1 and turn right and then go to Rio Road and turn right. Got it? Right.

Even if that's not as confusing to drive as to read, many people will exit at Carmel Valley Road and brave that intersection before attempting the little exercise to the south.

It is a well-known fact that if traffic levels rise too high in any area of Carmel Valley, building could be halted as mandated in the Carmel Valley Master Plan. The county public works department has already found that traffic on Carmel Rancho Boulevard is approaching the saturation point.

Supporters of Caltrans' plan say a Rio Road extension to the Rancho Canada area would alleviate traffic at the mouth of the valley, by allowing valley residents to bypass that area.

That may be true in a hypothetical sense, but the county has no money for such an undertaking.

While politics sometimes inspires strange bedfellows, opponents of Caltrans' Hatton Canyon Freeway design are giving that idea new meaning.

Witness the various residents, planners, ecologists, state Coastal Commission, merchants and even the Carmel City Council, all who are finding fault with much of the current design plans.

While The Carmel Pine Cone does not pretend to be experts in road engineering, we are well aware of how local residents value the unique beauty of the Monterey Peninsula.

A massive elevated freeway rising out of the Hatton Canyon and extending to the Carmel River is not in the best traditions of Carmel. Orange County, maybe — but not this peninsula.

So let's put away our toys, Caltrans, come off our high horse, and come up with a road (that's right, after all is said and done, it's just a road), that will meet the needs of peninsula residents while maintaining the integrity of our way of life. After all, we're the ones that have to live with it...or without it.

Hayward officials unhappy with Handley deal

By NANCY HILLS

THE CITY of Carmel has almost finalized its agreement with Thomas Handley to buy the property currently occupied by Hayward Lumber Co. on Junipero Avenue, but the provisions of the sale are not making lumber company officials happy.

The company received a 30-day eviction notice from Thomas Handley on Nov. 1. The company, which has several other lumberyards in the area, has been on a month-to-month verbal rental agreement for about five or six years.

Bill Hayward, great-great-grandson of the Hayward Lumber Co.'s founder, stated that 30 days is not enough time for them to move and wants the city to change the financing plans for the purchase to allow Hayward Lumber Co. to stay.

The council will discuss at its December meeting plans to turn the site into a landscaped parking lot. Plans call for the removal of two sheds that block the view of Point Lobos and at least 75 parking places.

The company has been at the Junipero Avenue location since 1949, Hayward said, and was started in Pacific Grove in 1919. It is headquartered in Salinas.

Hayward said they began negotiating with the city in October after the council announced that it had a tentative deal with Handley for the purchase of the property.

"We didn't pay attention to what was going on because for the last five years we've heard that there is a sale in the works almost every month," he explained.

The company was looking to move into Alan Williams' proposed service center in Carmel Valley, but the traffic on Carmel Valley Road had placed a virtual moratorium on new building out there.

He denies a report that in October, his family offered to buy the property from Handley for more money than the city had offered.

"We've never been a buyer," he said. "We couldn't afford to run a lumberyard out of a piece of property we purchased for $2.5 million."

The city is purchasing the land through a non-profit corporation which will sell tax exempt certificates of participation (like bonds) to finance the acquisition. Under those conditions, it would be illegal for the city to lease the site to a "for profit" business.

Hayward wants the city to issue taxable certificates, which go for a higher rate of interest. The company would make up the difference between taxable and non-taxable certificate rates, he said.

Carmel City Administrator Doug Schmitz explained changing the certificate issue from tax exempt to taxable could jeopardize the agreement between the city and Handley.

The council is scheduled to finalize the documents on Dec. 8, Schmitz said, and Hayward's request came too late.

According to that agreement, the city will pay Handley a total of $2.542 million for the property through two certificate issues, and the total sale — including closing costs but excluding interest — is about $3 million.

The first issue is for $950,000 in tax exempt certificates which will pay the first installment to Handley of $500,000, closing costs, site improvements and set up a reserve.

Though estimates use 7.5 percent as the interest rate, what is actually will be will depends upon the rate at the date of issue.

THE SECOND issue is the crucial one to the tax exempt status.

The second issue will be for $2,042,000 in tax exempt certificates, at the same rate of interest as the first issue, but Handley will receive these certificates rather than a lump sum of cash for his property.

As the holder of the tax exempt certificates, Handley will receive about $335,000 a year for 10 years tax free from the certificates.

It is the tax exempt annual payments that is the important ingredient in why the city cannot change the agreement at this time, Schmitz said, particularly since Handley wants to complete the sale by Dec. 31.

"We asked our bond counsel to look into taxable certificates but they came back and said it was too risky," Schmitz said. "We tried to work it out."

Hayward, however, states that Handley's attorney, Don Hubbard, told him that Handley did not care whether the certificates are tax exempt or not. Hubbard did not return The Carmel Pine Cone call before press time.

Hayward said that not only would his company make up the approximately four point difference in the certificate interest rate between taxable and non-taxable certificates, the city would be getting the lease payments and sales tax of about $23,000 a year to add to its coffers.

Schmitz pointed out that the city would be liable for the increased interest rates if Hayward Lumber Co. somehow reneged on the agreement or wanted to relocate.

Hayward added that Mayor Jean Grace had told him that the city did not "owe him an explanation" when he asked why it would not look further into the matter.

Grace told Carmel Pine Cone that Hayward had continued to ask three times after she had told him that changing to taxable bonds would it "jeopardize the deal" and they had been advised by bond counsel not to do that.

"I told him that his agreement was with Thomas Handley, his landlord, and not the city," she said.

With nine people working at the lumberyard and many of the local contractors using its services, Hayward said he believes that leaving Carmel will harm the residents.

"They are losing a resident-oriented business," Hayward said.

If they have to go, he added, the company would continue to offer the high quality merchandise at its Pacific Grove location until they find another spot.

"A lot of local contractors have expressed their concern that we are leaving," he added.

Pebble Beach residents irate over grading permit OK

By DAVID LELAND

A GROUP of angry Pebble Beach residents this week vowed to appeal a grading permit issued to the Pebble Beach Co. that allows coastal access work to resume on 17 Mile Drive.

The subject of fierce debate since Monterey County "red tagged" the work five months ago, the project was given the go-ahead by county Planning Director Bob Slimmon during a public hearing last Thursday after he issued a negative declaration.

While Slimmon attached 27 conditions to the permit, eliminated a 125-car parking lot and removed 59 parking spaces from a parking lot expansion already started at Bird Rock, members of the Preserve 17 Mile Drive Committee are not pleased.

"We only got what should have been ours in the first place," said committee spokesperson Kathy Pritchert. "No favor was really done. What they are doing is giving something back that wasn't theirs to take in the first place."

It is the scope of the work, mandated in the Del Monte Forest Land Use Plan and attached as part of the permit for The Inn at Spanish Bay, that has Pritchert and her group concerned.

Approved by the state Coastal Commission in 1984, the land use plan requires improvements in coastal accesses at 11 points, including Bird Rock, Seal Beach, Fan Shell Beach and Pescadero Point.

"They (access points) are in excess," Pritchert said. "We need an amendment to correct that."

Currently the Monterey County Planning Commission has formed a subcommittee — consisting of L.M. "Mo" Orrett, Jo Stallard and Marit Evans — to review public input received last week during a planning commission public hearing on the possibility of amending the land use plan.

Committee members are scheduled to report back to the full planning commission during a public hearing Dec. 14. No time had been scheduled at press time.

The Preserve 17 Mile Drive Committee had asked Slimmon to wait until it had been decided if the land use plan would be amended before he made his decision.

But Slimmon said that, while the two issues were related, he could not make a decision on what might be decided at a future planning commission hearing.

He added that he did not require an environmental impact report, as asked for by the committee, because he deemed it unnceccesary.

"The environmental information report that was required with the application resulted in that we could develop conditions that would mitigate any environmental effects," he said. "The law says you can do that."

BUT PRITCHERT said she believes that the entire thrust of the project is moving toward increased traffic within the forest.

"The Pebble Beach Co. has openly admitted that they plan to use those parking lots for destination parking," she said. "Any time you fill up parking lots, you bring in more traffic."

Slimmon's decision reduced the number of parking spaces at Bird Rock by 59; Fan Shell Beach by five; and, by eliminating a parking lot on the bluffs, the number of parking spaces was reduced by 125.

The Pebble Beach Co.'s plans for 548 parking spaces has now been scaled down to 357, with six bus spaces.

Even though its plans have been changed, Pebble Beach Co. spokesperson Candace Ingram said the company is satisfied with the judgment.

"The Pebble Beach Co. is willing to complete the project in a manner that is acceptable to the county and the (state) Coastal Commission," Ingram said. "The planning department's decision appears to reflect careful consideration of the many concerns that were expressed during the process."

Saul Weingarten, a Pebble Beach resident and attorney representing the committee, said an appeal will be filed this week.

The next step in the appeals process will be heard at the Monterey County Board of Appeals — that decision can be appealed to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

The Preserve 17 Mile Drive Committee has 30 days in which to file an appeal.

Weingarten pointed out that if all else fails, the 17 Mile Drive Committee still has its $10 million lawsuit on file with Monterey County.

Filed last July, the suit names the Pebble Beach Co., Monterey County and the state Coastal Commission as defendants.

Intitially the action asked for a restraining order, but Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver ruled that political solutions must be exhausted before the court would consider a restraining order.

Legislation introduced setting Big Sur River 'wild and scenic'

CALIFORNIA SEN. Pete Wilson announced he will introduce legislation in the next Congress creating more than 250,000 acres of new wilderness areas in the Los Padres National Forest, and designating as "wild and scenic," portions of the Big Sur River, Sisquoc River and Sespe Creek totaling some 73 miles."

"The pristine beauty of these areas of the Los Padres National Forest and the Big Sur and Sisquoc Rivers and Sespe Creek should be cherished and preserved for future generations of Californians to enjoy," Wilson said. "I plan to introduce legislation to do just that when Congress reconvenes in January."

Last March, the U.S. Forest Service released a plan for future management of the Los Padres National Forest. Wilson said his legislation—and companion legislation introduced in the House of Representatives by Rep. Robert Lagomarsino—incorporate recommendations made in the plan.

Phase III rationing plan approved by water board tested that the district is not going to impose a moratorium on new water connections while rationing existing businesses and residents.

"I don't know whether the board recognizes it or not, but by not establishing a moratorium, it is sending a signal to existing residents and to potential new residents that our water situation is not all that serious," Hekhuis said. "Is this the kind of signal that is appropriate for a water emergency?"

Others agreed with Hekhuis, one stating that no new connections should be handed out until the district knows more about what kind of weather patterns the area can expect in the future.

One speaker, Rod Holmgren, called for an additional reduction for golf courses and for the resignation of both water board chairman Nick Lombardo, who is president of Rancho Canada Golf Club, and Don Boston, chairman of the district's Urban Water Conservation Steering Committee.

Holmgren referred to the 655 acre feet of water Lombardo used on his two golf courses during the last water year and estimated 803 acre feet that was used the year before. Other courses use too much water, he added.

Those numbers make the golf courses two of the highest users of water and Rancho Canada one of the single largest water users on the peninsula.

"Golf course water is used by grass, not people," Holmgren said. "There are large areas of golf courses that don't need watering. In England, the golf courses don't bother with watering the fairways."

In calling for the resignation of Boston, Holmgren noted that Boston who works for Lombardo at Rancho Canada.

While the audience applauded Holmgren's remarks, no one else spoke in favor of Lombardo's resignation.

Meals on Wheels needs volunteers

Drivers and other volunteers are needed to deliver 200 meals daily to shut-ins and the handicapped on the peninsula for Meals on Wheels.

According to Chuck Poland, a Carmel volunteer, 200 homes are served with three meals five days a week from Carmel Valley to Marina, but 22 volunteer drivers are needed daily to deliver those meals.

"We were seven drivers short the other day," said Poland, who has been pressed into service so often that he's driving almost daily now. "It means a lot to these people. You thank your lucky stars when you leave."

Poland said there are 22 routes, three of them in the Carmel area. One route usually takes from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. (including driving to and from the pick-up point in Pacific Grove).

Each shut-in is delivered a breakfast, one cold meal (usually sandwich, salad and juice), and one hot meal. He added that volunteers are also needed to make sandwiches and salads at the Meals On Wheels kitchen in New Monterey.

Almost all of the help is from volunteers, Poland said, so often the agency ends up shorthanded. If you would like to volunteer to help out, contact Meals on Wheels at 375-4454.

Meals on Wheels is a non-profit organization now in its 16th year.

Free booklet now available to seniors

A free booklet called "Life Styles for Seniors" is now available to senior citizens from the Park Lane, a retirement center located on the Monterey Peninsula.

The booklet helps seniors to identify their preferred life styles, evaluate financial considerations, and explore housing options, including characteristics to look for in rental retirement communities.

Senior citizens can receive a free copy of "Life Styles for Seniors" by calling 373-0101 or writing The Park Lane, 200 Glenwood Circle, Monterey, CA 93940.

plantings is truly beautiful and brings to mind a line from Keats—"A thing of beauty is a joy forever."

This is tempered, however, by the unsightly spectacle of clumps of dog feces among the plantings, occasionally on the walkway itself, and on the adjacent curb. This unseemly spectacle is not confined to the beach walkway but is to be noted throughout the city of Carmel. Of late I have been cleaning up some clusters. On November 9 I cleaned up ten individual clusters of dog feces.

The desecration of our beautiful community is intolerable. The solution is so simple. Those of us who walk our dogs anywhere in Carmel should carry a bag or two at all times. Any bag will do but the plastic bags obtained in the produce section of the supermarkets are ideal. The bag is simply everted, the deposit picked up, the bag inverted over the deposit, the bag tied, and placed in the nearest trash can. This is my practice when I walk my beautiful poodle twice daily. The problem is serious, the solution is simple.

The vast majority of dog owners are, in my experience, kind, considerate and caring people. Unfortunately, caring does not always preclude carelessness. Moreover, failure to clean up after one's dog places one in violation of the Carmel Nuisance Ordinance 6.08.110.

Many years ago our niece, age 9, accompanied us on frequent automobile trips. When we traversed breathtaking scenery in this magnificent country of ours our niece would say, "Drink it in, Aunt Doris." And so I say to you, dog owners-dog lovers, "Drink it in, drink in this lovely community and its superb beach walkway. In doing so please be responsible for the total care of your beloved pet—including sanitation and hygiene. Please help keep all of Carmel beautiful!

One-sided report?

Dear Editor:

Regarding David Leland's column of Nov. 10, reporting the Carmel Business Association (CBA) meeting of Nov. 3, my feeling is that his report was biased and one sided.

The situation between Art Lewis and the board of directors of the CBA has escalated over a period of a year. He ignored the fact that Art has tried, on numerous occasions, to obtain resolution within the system.

To use untrue words such as "hostile takeover," "brouhaha," "diatribe," "hopping mad," "One burr under his saddle" and "pooh-poohed," is slanderous. To quote, out of context, "Do you need the money that bad that you have to open it (membership) up to those people?" is irresponsible. He did not include the reasoning behind this statement.

His report makes Art sound egotistical and prejudiced and thereby damages our business reputation in this community. His words are libelous. Anyone who has worked or traded with Art or used our services would quickly disagree with the portrait of the egomaniac he attempted to bring before the public.

There are two sides to every story. Even a beginning journalism student or a lay-person such as myself knows a reporter's job is to collect information from and speak to BOTH sides before printing a story.

I am deeply disappointed in his actions, lack of ethics and his lofty attitude. Art is a caring and concerned member of this area's business community. He saw something wrong and has tried to correct it for the betterment of both the CBA and the business community.

In Mr. Leland's article, Art's comments on the subjects are conspicuous by their absence. Isn't it true, in all fairness, that his side of the story should be heard? After all, fredom of speech and the right to disagree are fundamental to our American society.

In response to Ms. Adolph's final remark "I feel sorry for him; I think this is destroying him, slowly." I feel it is tragic that when we attempt to foresee another's fate we are often looking into our own mirror.

which can be counted on to govern the affairs of the association and then do not follow them.

When they actively suppress the answering of questions posed by members.

When they ignore written communications.

When they, without just cause, take unlawful action to eliminate members who disagree with them.

When they insist that their opinion on a subject is always right and anyone who disagrees is always wrong.

When they conduct general membership meetings in such a way that there is NEVER a documented vote on ANYTHING.

When the records of their own meetings are so clerically sloppy that it is difficult to determine if their actions were proper.

When board members who should be replaced for clear rule violations are allowed to continue on post.

When they refuse to allow themselves to be investigated.

When they use out-points to justify their actions:

1. Omitted data.
2. Altered sequence.
3. Dropped time.
4. Falsehood.
5. Altered importance.

When no board member has ever been heard to take an oath of office.

All of the above are true about the Board of Directors of the Carmel Business Association!

If you don't believe me, come to a meeting and watch what doesn't happen.

It is incredible how reactive the alleged leadership of an organization can become when a member simply asks that they follow the rules (Robert's Rules of Order), that have been agreed upon by ALL members and specified as "the parliamentary authority for the association," in their by-laws.

Those who understand that their rights as members can only be protected by the administration of objective rules will join me in urging future directors to take a stand for established order rather than arbitrary repression.

Open to discussion

Dear Editor:

Never in my memory of Carmel events of the past 30 years has there been so little public discussion or enlightenment on a matter of such potentially serious community impact as in the case of whether the city should purchase the Handley (lumber yard) property. It would now appear the deed is all but done, and the citizens still do not know from the city council:

- Whether it is a good idea, and, if so, why.
- If there is any real community need for which only this property will suffice, or if there is indeed any serious need to which it can be put.
- What kind of careful study (if any) of the ramifications of this has been made, and if so, what are the results.
- How this purchase will be paid for, and at what possible sacrifice of other more needed programs.
- Whether the uses of the property could be accomplished to better community advantage under private ownership, using the city's zoning powers for planning.
- Whether the council's motivation on this action is spurred primarily by an informal opinion survey, which was sampled in a highly emotional political climate without benefit of public discussion on all sides of the question.
- Whether the citizens would favor this purchase, given a full disclosure of all the facts and an extensive discussion of all the issues involved.

The community deserves better than this. Instead it gets what amounts to rationalizing and excuses. Who needs a park when a large one exists only a block and a half away, and what benefit is an expensive parking facility in an area of little demonstrable need for it. It's time to stand back and look at the facts rather than lurch forward into the dark.

What standards?

Dear Editor:

It was with great interest that I read your Nov. 10 article on the city's residential development and design standards requested by the city council. After having attended the Nov. 9 planning commission meeting, I wonder if they were aware of the citizen's concerns and will take them seriously. Despite neighbors' complaints, they OK'd five two-story additions, and two large houses to replace small ones.

Two people complained that they no longer would be able to look out at trees, that they would have to look at second stories instead, but their pleas were ignored.

I complained that a 900-square-foot house was being replaced with a bulky two-story house of 2,495 square feet. Another house is to be built on the same property. I felt that it wasn't in keeping with the neighborhood both from size, type and price. A commissioner told me that some people like bigger houses!

The Pine Cone also contained several articles on water problems. Replacing a one-bathroom house with two houses with five to six bathrooms isn't my idea

Panetta seeking winter intern

REP. LEON E. Panetta is accepting applications from college students who wish to serve as interns in his Washington, D.C. office during the winter of 1989.

He said that applicants for internships should be prepared to work in his office from January until March, although he noted that adjustments could be made for individual interns.

Students interested in an internship should call Panetta's local office or send a postcard requesting an application to Representative Leon E. Panetta, 339 Cannon House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515.

The deadline for receipt of applications is Dec. 1, and Panetta said that applicants would be informed whether they had been accepted by Dec. 15.

Panetta urged interested students to request an application as soon as possible. He also said he would accept applications for the spring and summer of 1989.

Panetta said that interns would do research, writing, and office support work. He also said they would be responsible for their own housing, transportation, and other expenses in Washington.

Fire department to push for new home sprinklers

By NANCY HILLS

WHAT WOULD you grab if your house caught fire and you had just seconds to get out?

Art Black, fire prevention specialist for the Carmel Fire Department, believes there is a way to make that question virtually moot.

Black, representing the Carmel Fire Department, on Dec. 6 will formally present to the Carmel City Council an ordinance that will require installation of residential fire sprinklers in new homes and major remodels in the R-1 district.

The ordinance, similar to the one for the commercial district, would require residential sprinkler installation in all new homes and remodels that are 50 percent or more of the value of the home.

Black explained that after 15 years of use, the effectiveness of home sprinklers can be statistically proven.

"The average claim paid by insurance companies in a residential fire is $70,000. In a home with a sprinkler system, it is $700," Black said, citing numbers from the insurance industry.

The sprinkler system puts the fire out in its very first stage, while the fire department usually gets there when it is well under way in homes without the system. Sprinklers also can save on water damage, contrary to popular opinion.

"One sprinkler puts out 30 gallons per minute while a firehose puts out about 180 gallons per minute," Black said.

Though many homes have smoke detectors, that can not do all the things a sprinkler system can, he added.

"A smoke detector will wake you up so you can get out of the house," Black said, "but a sprinkler system will save not only your life but your house and mementoes as well."

Fears that sprinkler systems will inundate a home to put out a small kitchen fire or will go off accidentally are unfounded and based on misinformation, Black said.

"Hollywood likes to portray all the sprinklers going off at once, but that's not true," he explained.

Only the sprinklers directly affected by the heat go off, he said, because of the way the sprinkler head is built.

"There is a little fusable link built into the sprinkler," Black said.

When it melts because of the heat from a fire, it allows the water to flow through, activating the sprinkler. That is true of most commercial systems also, he added.

"The chances of them going off accidentally are almost nil," he said.

The type that goes off all at once is rare and used only in heavy industrial locations which need to deluge a fire.

The residential fire system is much better looking and non-intrusive in a home's decor, he added. While commercial fire systems have exposed metal pipes and large sprinkler heads that hang down from the ceiling, heads used for residential sprinkler head are smaller and close to the ceiling or wall.

ECONOMICALLY, A residential sprinkler system is in a different league altogether than a a commercial system.

"It is completely different. Residential sprinklers are built to a completely different standard with smaller sprinkler heads. The piping for residential systems permits can use plastic PVC (polyvinylchloride) — similar to the white PVC people use in household plumbing. The system is also designed for ease of installation," Black said.

A plumber — with a state license for residential sprinklers — can install the system, he added, and the homeowner does not have to hire a more expensive sprinkler company.

"In completely new construction, it costs about $1.25 per square foot to install," Black said. "The average size home built in Carmel is 1,800 square feet. That means the system would cost $2,250. When you compare that to the cost of building a home, it is not much to protect the entire investment," he said.

On a remodel, the per square foot increases or decreases according to how much remodeling is being done. The more remodeling, the less per square foot, Black said, because it is more like new construction. The cost increases to a maximum of about $2 a square foot

"We are not talking about an awfully lot of money when a home in Carmel costs about $225,000. We're talking about 1 percent of the price and that's pretty cheap insurance," Black said. "When you consider how much of your life is in your home, a little part of you burns up in a fire."

We need you.

of helping the water problem.

If the planning commission really wants to be serious about citizens' concerns about our design standards, why don't they stop issuing permits for projects that clearly violate these concerns until the problems can be aired out, the codes changed, or the general plan amended.

Equal opportunity

Dear Editor:

The present emphasis on equal opportunity is often disregarded in respect to single, widowed or divorced persons in two areas. These are ticket and membership rates, which often are quoted at a higher rate, for persons who are not married than they are for married couples.

Such differentiation is not only unfair but also results in less revenue than if prices were quoted on a "per-person" basis.

Therefore, consideration of equal opportunity should be undertaken by all organizations seeking memberships or selling tickets for fund-raising or charitable events.

Leaving a legacy

Dear Editor:

Mary Sigourney, who died Oct. 19, left a legacy that will not be forgotten by those of us who worked closely with her when she published the advocate from September 1965 to April 1968.

The spirit of the message she constantly fought to bring to the people of the Monterey Peninsula was best stated in a headline over an article covering the ongoing water issue. It was the first article she published and the headline began with "Public Vs. Private Interest..."

Carrying byline articles by Stan Cloud, Caspar W. Weinberger, poet Joaquin Garcia, Hasting Reservation zoologist Dr. John Davis and the columnist Dorothy Durham, the advocate fought and won many battles in the public's interest. It will always be a part of the journalistic history of our area. Thanks to Mary Sigourney.

Thanksgiving dinner offered free by local businessman

THERE ARE several organizations on the peninsula offering free Thanksgiving dinners this year, but how many of them can boast of door-to-door limousine service?

For the third straight year Hans Munck, the dapper owner of Your Maitre d' limousine and catering service, is offering free turkey dinners with all the trimmings to the lonely, poor, elderly and handicapped of the Monterey Peninsula. Munck and his staff are donating their time to put on this charitable feast, set for 1 to 4 p.m. on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 24 at the Church of the Wayfarer in Carmel.

All that Munck asks is that you call ahead to reserve a dinner; reservations are limited to the first 500. In addition Munck is offering free limousine service to the handicapped and those otherwise unable to get to the church that day.

"This has been a dream of mine for several years, to help the community this way," says Munck, a native of Denmark. "Only in America can one truly experience freedom, opportunity for success, and the concern for one's fellow man."

Normally Munck is seen squiring the likes of Clint Eastwood, Tony Bennett, Yoko Ono, Joan Fontaine, and John Travolta around the peninsula in his limousines, as well as catering a variety of parties, but this is an event he really takes pride in. He also supports a number of other charities on the peninsula in addition to his annual charity dinner, including Special Olympics, March of Dimes, Make-A-Wish Foundation and Boy Scouts of America.

"I think it is a privilege to support such fine organizations," he says. "It is a way of helping my fellow man as well as introducing my business to the community."

To make a reservation please call Your Maitre d' at 624-1717 by Saturday, Nov. 19. The Church of the Wayfarer is located at Lincoln and Seventh in Carmel.

HANS MUNCK, owner of Your Maitre d', a limousine and catering service, is offering free Thanksgiving dinners to the poor, needy, handicapped and elderly, 1 to 4 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 24 at Church of the Wayfarer. Reservations are a must.

A clean sweep

CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA TAKES the environmental lead once again. The city has placed eight dispensers with free "pooper scooper" bags along the beach walkway. City Forester Gary Kelly explained that the little presents dogs tend to leave behind on their sojourns are a major problem and complaints are rolling in. Dogs will remain welcome on the walkway but the city hopes that dog owners will be responsible for their furry friends. The city is testing the program with about 500 scooper bags at a total cost of about $100. Of course, the bags can be used in other parts of town for the same purpose. (Nancy Hills photos.)

Reagan signs sanctuary bill

PRESIDENT RONALD Reagan signed into law a measure introduced by Rep. Leon E. Panetta which will set in motion the process of establishing a national marine sanctuary at Monterey Bay.

The provision is part of a larger bill reauthorizing the national marine sanctuary program.

Under the new law, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) must develop a management plan for the bay by December 1989. The law does not specify any regulations or restrictions to be included in the plan. However, Panetta noted that the plan could include regulations to protect the bay from various sources of pollution, including offshore oil and gas drilling.

"I am pleased to hear that the president has signed into law this critical legislation," Panetta said. "It will give Monterey Bay, which is truly one of this nation's unique environmental treasures, the protection it needs and deserves.

"Of course, Monterey Bay is not just an environmental teasure. It is a critical part of the economy of California's central coast, and it is a unique research laboratory.

"It is unfortunate that the bay is faced with such threats as offshore oil drilling and dumping of toxic wastewater from the San Joaquin Valley. But these threats do exist, and a marine sanctuary will create the framework we need to protect Monterey Bay."

Panetta said that local governments, fishermen, and their organizations and individuals will be given a significant role in helping to establish the boundaries, policies, and management plan for the sanctuary.

A local advisory group will be established to make recommendations to NOAA and ensure that local views are refleced in the development of the plan, he added.

The governor of California and Congress may disapprove elements of the final management plan.

CARMEL DOING ITS QUOTA OF HIGHWAY REPAIRS

Repair work on the highway near the northern limits of the city have been under way since last Tuesday. Contractor Sydney Ruthven has a crew of men and the necessary machinery on the job, which should be completed next week.

With this bit of roadway in good shape, the entire route from Carmel to Monterey will have an excellent surface, thus making trips over the hill a pleasure rather than a nightmare.

The Pine Cone has long agitated for this improvement.

LOOK FOR METEORS LISTEN FOR COYOTES

Mid-November has brought Carmel clear skies, the better to see the flight of meteors which blaze in the sky this time of year. Several fine displays have been seen on these moonless nights.

The season for hearing coyotes is also on—if you've got good ears. On a still evening or early morning, they may be heard not far from the city limits.

BEETLES KILL PINE TREES

An additional 37 Monterey pines in Carmel have been killed by the beetle infestation that destroyed 91 trees in a 14-month period ending last February. The eight-month total number appears to be growing, according to Gregory D'Ambrosio, the city forester.

Some 20 pines were killed and at least 40 more were damaged here by bark beetles in October alone, he said. The infestation spread to Mission Trail Park and killed 15 pines, according to D'Ambrosio.

An additional 70 pines in Carmel are in serious condition. Forestry crews are working to save the trees by chipping the insects out.

COUNCIL APPROVES SECOND KITCHENS

A reluctant Carmel City Council—after decades of bickering over fears of speculation, increased density and the erosion of the single-family residential neighborhoods—has relented and eventually will legalize the low-cost housing units known as "second kitchens."

However, the approval is granted to only existing illegal second kitchens, which will be restricted by a myriad of controls still to be developed by the planning staff.

The council in a special Nov. 10 study session with the planning commission approved "in concept" the legalization of second kitchens. Councilman Robert Stephenson was the only dissenter.

Actual legalization will not come until controls are adopted by the council sometime in early 1984.

MONTEREY COUNTY ACADEMIC DECATHLON SCHEDULED FOR NOV. 19

High school juniors and seniors will be flexing their academic muscles at the eighth annual Monterey County Academic Decathlon competition, scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 19, from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. at North Salinas High School.

Competing this year for trophies, medals and the chance to represent Monterey County at the California Academic Decathlon will be one team each from eight area high schools: Carmel High, Gonzales High, King City High, Monterey High, North Monterey County High, North Salinas High, Salinas High and Seaside High. Last year's winner, North Salinas High School, finished ninth at the state competition.

Each team will consist of six players, two from each of the following divisions: Varsity (0.00-2.99 GPA), Scholastic (3.00-3.74) and Honor (3.75-4.00).

Every member of every team must compete in all 10 events: economics, mathematics, fine arts, science, language and literature, social science, planned and impromptu speech, giving an interview, writing an essay, and the Super Quiz, a head-to-head competition similar to the old TV quiz show "The College Bowl." The Super Quiz subject this year is the U.S. Presidency.

First, second and third place winners in each event will win Olympic-size gold, silver and bronze medals, except in the "Super Quiz," where the winning team will receive a trophy. The overall high scoring team will win a large trophy, as well as the chance to compete at the state level. This year, Hartnell College will award the winners with tuition vouchers good for one year of free tuition at Hartnell College.

The Monterey County Academic Decathlon is sponsored by the Monterey County Office of Education and coordinated by Mel Schumacher. The contributors are Baskin-Robbins, Hartnell College, Jostens-Rich Sarkisian, Maderak Construction, McCormick Schilling, Monterey County MENSA, Nestles, North Salinas High School Booster Club, PG&E, Pepsi-Cola of Salinas, Prunedale Lions Club, Salinas Board of Realtors, Sea Lines Graphics, TJP Construction, Western Graphics and Marvin and Karla Wolf.

"We're very pleased to be able to use the best for this exciting project," said Eric Scheffer, the show's producer, "Elli and Brian have written music for all three major networks and dozens of commercials in the past year, as well as scoring three feature films."

The prolific team of Baer and Bennett attribute their success to a concept they began pioneering five years ago. They use their extensive classical training to combine acoustic instruments with the latest computerized film and video scoring techniques. "This gives the score a very warm, yet up-to-date sound," said Bennett, "It gives us the best of both worlds: the speed of the computer with the personality of real instruments."

According to Scheffer, "You can expect the music to reflect the typical warmth and humor that has made George Burns the legend that he is."

Bennett is a 1971 graduate of Carmel High School.

HOSPICE LAUNCHES INITIAL PHASE OF CAPITAL CAMPAIGN TO RAISE $5 MILLION

Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula has begun the first phase of a campaign to raise $5 million to build a new 24-bed facility in Monterey, it was announced by J. Daniel Tibbitts of Carmel, chairman of the Capital Campaign Committee and Robert Brower of Carmel, Hospice board chairman.

At the same time, it was revealed that Hospice has already received a $1 million anonymous matching grant. Hospice also has received the donation of a building site from The Pebble Beach Co. and a contribution of $250,000 from the Mary Wolf Rolfing Bogue Foundation.

"A new and larger facility will allow us to operate with greater cost efficiency, permit us to include a pediatric unit and accommodate an anticipated increase in demand for services," Tibbitts said. Hospice currently operates a six-bed facility in Carmel Valley.

Brower stressed that the three-year Capital Campaign will be conducted in tandem with each year's patient care drive. "It is essential to provide continuing financial support for the on-going program while we raise funds for the new care center. The board is fully committed to providing the same level of care quality during this period," he added.

Hospice will seek to raise the necessary funds over a three-year period through pledges from foundations, individuals and families and from community organizations.

Homer M. Hayward, Carmel Valley, Malcolm S. Millard, Carmel, Kenneth C. Schley, Carmel, Verle Bogue, Pebble Beach, Wilfrid Daly, Pebble Beach, George P. Kendall, Pebble Beach, and Helen Westland, Pebble Beach, comprise the Advance Gifts Committee, which has begun its activities.

Peter C. Wright, Pebble Beach and John Cope, Carmel and San Francisco, co-chair the Foundation Grants effort.

PASSING NOTES

By Ticien Carlson

The end of an era

"IT HAD to come," Carmel High girl's swimming coach Bruce Cates told me after the infamous Monterey meet a few weeks ago. "No one wins forever." But it seemed like the Carmel girls had been winning forever, with a record of 164-1 since girls swimming began on the peninsula 18 years ago, and 144 consecutive wins before the Monterey meet.

While Monterey has posed a greater threat to us in recent years, no one thought that they could actually beat us.

"The circumstances were in Monterey's favor," Coach Cates explained. The meet was held in Monterey's four-lane pool as opposed to the standard six-lane pool. This shifted the points in favor of first-place finishes rather than team depth. And depth has always been how Carmel has won, with lots of girls beating out opponents for third, fourth, and fifth places. Fighting for every point, they outscored teams with a few fast swimmers. Former coach Bob Walthour called these "B" swimmers, the "killer bees" and would recruit young, average and even poor swimmers, turning them into valuable members of the team.

Monterey was able to defeat us because our "killer bee" tactics don't work in a pool with only four placings possible. But it wasn't all the pool. The Monterey swimmers deserve a lot of credit for working hard and swimming very well.

The loss to Monterey was enough to hinder Carmel's momentum coming into the league finals. Carmel had not lost this meet since the league was formed in 1970. Once again, however, Monterey outswam us, this time in our own pool.

Although disappointed, Walthour, who was the team coach from 1970 to 1986, feels that the end of Carmel's steak will be "good for girls' swimming on the peninsula." Now, other teams will have more incentive to work harder.

The losses have been tough on the Cramel girls. It is a terrible burden to have lost such a long-standing winning streak. There have been a lot of tears, but the girls have really pulled together and supported each other. It has been suggested that the team in general had grown too confident and these losses were necessary to shake the team up. There is no question that the girl's swim team will be twice as motivated and twice as tough next year and I have no doubt that Carmel will remain the dominating force in swimming for years to come.

Training is available at this time for viola, oboe, bassoon, French horn, string bass and trombone.

There will be no charge for this training to any student who demonstrates the motivation to progress and who resides in Monterey County. If a student is accepted into the Youth or Honors Orchestra, and wishes to continue with the trainer, lesson fees will then be charged to the student.

SENIOR LINE

By Bill Schneider

Mission Impossible

Q. CAN you tell me in understandable language how my Social Security benefit will be computed? I plan to retire next year on my 64th birthday at which time my wife, who will be 62 in the same month, will apply. My wife worked some years ago and will probably receive a small benefit. I have paid in the maximum every year for the last 40 years.

KD, Monterey

A. IN your case the 31 highest years of earnings will be used. Don't bother trying to add them up or anything else since the earnings from the earlier years are weighted to account for lower average earnings and inflation and then a formula is used to arrive at your Primary Insurance Amount (PIA). The PIA is the amount you would receive monthly based on the earnings already credited to your account if you had waited till age 65 to start drawing. In your case since you will start at age 64, your benefit (PIA) will be reduced by 5/9th of 1% for each month that you draw benefits before age 65 or 6 2/3%.

As an example, assume your benefit, if you waited till age 65, to be 800 per month. At age 64 it would be about $746 per month. Your wife would always receive anything earned on her own record but if the wife's benefit is higher, the difference would be added to her own benefit. The wife's benefit, if she waits until age 65 is 50% of your PIA. For each month she receives benefits before age 65, the wife's benefit would be reduced by 25/36 of 1% or in this example 50% of your PIA equals $400 reduced 25% or $300 per month for the wife's benefit. Not easily done in understandable language.

Q. YESTERDAY my doctor told me that the needle biopsy he made on my breast, after doing a mammogram, revealed cancer. He said I should have an operation with either a partial or a complete mastectomy. I have an appointment with the surgeon next week to help me decide which type of operation to have. I suppose I have the usual fears as to appearance and continuance of my life style but am most concerned about the reaction of my husband who still knows nothing about this. How can I bring him into the picture without causing undue emotional problems for both of us?

RS, Salinas

A. FIRST of all, the decisions as to when and what type of operation are strictly yours. Of course your husband should be included in the decision making. I suggest three ways to help both of you understand what is about to happen.

After you tell him of the needed operation, have him listen to the Tel-Med tapes 6 and 178 on Breast Cancer and Breast Cancer Rehabilitation by calling 758-0961. Then, after he is more knowledgeable on the subject, have your doctor explain just what is involved before and after the operation. Next contact the "Reach to Recovery" self help group referred to on the Tel-Med tape at 422-2992. With the information and support received, I'm sure your problems will be eased.

Last month a close relative had a mastectomy. I called her husband six days after the operation to ask about her condition. She answered the phone, said she came home from the hospital yesterday, and no, I really wasn't interrupting since she was only doing the laundry and picking up the house.

TAKE MY WORD FOR IT

By D. Patrick Gallagher

Lie, lay

PERRIN TELLS us that formal English is denying a natural change in the language when it refuses to allow lay to replace lie in common use. There is no doubt the tenses of the verbs to lie and to lay are confusing to many of us, but I wonder if that is sufficient reason to abandon correct English and, perhaps more important, is it sufficient reason to abandon the exercise of thought that accompanies its application?

I learned the rule that "only living things lie" (double entendre) because to lie meant to recline and only living things could recline. While the rule is not entirely correct (lay, as past tense of lie, also means reclining), it was helpful to me in differentiating between lie and lay in many situations. Therefore, the dog lies down, we lie down, but one lays down the paper. The problem with this approach, insofar as the paper is concerned, is once the paper is down, one can let it lie there. The actual rule, of course, concerns verbs which are transitive (which take an object) and those which are intransitive (no object).

To lie (lie, lay, lain) is intransitive, no object. The verb relates only to the noun upon which it acts; he let it lie there; she lay down; they had lain (or they lay) in the sun for hours.

To lay (lay, laid, laid) is transitive, it requires a direct object of the verb. Lay it down; they laid the floor today; she had laid it away.

A further comparison of the two as transitive and intransitive verbs may be helpful. He laid (lay, laid, laid) his watch on the desk, but she lay (lie, lay, lain) on the couch (both past tense). Lay your watch on the desk; now the watch lies on the desk (both present tense). Lay the book (lay, laid, laid because book is the direct object) on the table, and yesterday it lay on the table (past tense of lie because no direct object). The dog lies on the floor, but yesterday he lay on the floor (both from lie, lay, lain). However, the dog laid his bone on the floor beside him (lay, laid, laid). I told the dog to lie down and I also told him to lay down his bone.

Another area where problems result is in the use of the present participles lying, formed from lie, lay, lain and laying formed from lay, laid, laid. He has a headache and is lying down (no object). He is laying down the bat (bat is the object of the verb).

Interesting exceptions for which there are no grammatical bases include some nautical expressions (i.e., "lay alongside") and "the hens are laying" (with the direct object "eggs" understood).

A problem similar to lie, lay is found in the use of sit, set (sit, sat, sat, and set, set, set). There is virtually no misuse in the present tense; I sit down, I set it down. The use of sat and set do, however, cause some doubt in people. He had set (or set) it in the corner, but they had sat (or sat) for hours. the same rule of transitive and intransitive verbs applies here.

Leave (leave, left, left) and let (let, let, let) are another pair which cause trouble. Although many dictionaries no longer recognize the distinction, leave me alone ought to mean one desires to be left in solitude (leave meaning to depart), while let me alone ought to mean allow me to be undisturbed. "I want to be left alone," is ungrammatical unless it means leave the room. It is easier to understand how the misuse arose when one substitutes by myself for alone, as in the previous example (I want to be left by myself). If one means don't bother me, the correct form is "I want to be let alone," or "Let me alone" (not, leave me alone). Garbo solved the problem with, "I vant to be alone."

Let and leave bring to mind words which contradict themselves. Why do pitted roads have pits, but pitted prunes do not? A fast rabbit runs, but a fast color doesn't, and how does one stand fast? If we cleave the head from the body, why do we cleave to an idea? If one thinks better of people, one seeks their company, but to think better of an idea is to dismiss it.

A GREAT clamour has arisen over the supposed pedantry of saying "It is I," instead of "It is me." Quotes from Churchill, Queen Elizabeth, Shelley and other purveyors of correct language descend ad infinitum, ad nauseum. One has gone so far as to claim "I was given a book" and "A book was given to me" to be identical objective case forms differing only in word order. That sort of common sense logic has a severely limited aplication in grammar. Any attempt to expand it beyond conveniently simple examples must be accepted as unworkable, or we might as well throw out all the rules now.

There can be no doubt that, "It is I," while grammatically correct, is unlikely ever to find acceptance in anything other than the most proper circles. Those circles will, however, be correct. Using common, but incorrect, forms in everyday speech is a matter of personal choice. However, bending rules to justify an unwillingness to use one's intellect, is destructive of good grammar and mental discipline. If anyone asks you who said that, tell him it was I.

(Editor's Note: Mr. Gallagher of Carmel regularly provides us with explanations of etymology, the history of constitutional terms, and errors in everyday English. For questions or comments, drop him a line at PO Box G-1, Carmel 93921.)

VOLUNTEER DIRECTORS AGENCY FORMED

Volunteers in Action has changed its name to Volunteer Center of the Monterey Peninsula, a name which better explains the agency's function, according to Barbara Whitman.

For the past 15 years VIA has acted as the peninsula non-profit agencies' agency. The new name—with the function actually remaining the same—better reflects that function, said Whitman. VIA has been a recruitment agency for all the non-profits on the peninsula and VCMP or the Volunteer Center for short, will continue recruiting.

The first major action of the Volunteer Center was to gather together volunteer directors from other non-profit agencies on the peninsula and form Directors Of Volunteers In Agencies. DOVIA held its organizational meeting Oct. 21 at the First National Bank. The purpose of DOVIA—the 10 present agreed—is to support people in the volunteer director position in non-profits, be they salaried or volunteer.

Meetings will be held monthly and will focus on four major aims: recruitment, placement, training and recognition. Barbara Whitman, executive director of the Volunteer Center, conducted the meeting. In attendance were Peggy Schaefer, Meals on Wheels of Salinas, Jennifer Stone, Community Counseling Center; Dorothy Stringer, YMCA of the Monterey Peninsula; Pat Garrigues, Suicide Prevention; Karen Stafford, Monterey Rape Crisis Center; Doug Stafford, Park Superintendent of Monterey; and Marcia Love-Jackson, Ted Horwood and G. Bob Rudd, all of the Salvation Army.

For information on DOVIA or the Volunteer Center call 373-6177.

Norman Craft

Norman Jackson Craft, a long-time Monterey Peninsula resident, died Sunday, Oct. 30 at Community Hospital of an unexpected heart attack after a minor operation. He was 74.

Mr. Craft, known as Jack, was born in Dayton, Ohio, June 8, 1914. He graduated from Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, in 1936, where he was a member of the Alpha Chapter of Beta Theta Pi Fraternity.

During World War II, he served in the Army Anti-Aircraft and was discharged as a major. He was in the insurance business in Chicago and San Francisco before moving to Monterey in 1951. He and George Clemens were partners of Monterey Insurance Agencies. Over the years, he was involved in the development and expansion of many Monterey Peninsula projects and affairs.

He retired in 1974 but continued to help many groups, often through his insurance brokerage background, such as the founding board of directors of the First National Bank of Monterey County. He lived in Monterey and Carmel before moving to Del Mesa Carmel two years ago.

Memberships included the Old Capitol Club, the Carmel Valley Racquet Club, the Carmel Valley Ranch and John Gardiner's Tennis Ranch.

He is survived by his wife of more than 42 years, Kate, a son, Nicholas of Richmond; a daughter, Elizabeth of Berkeley; two granddaughters and a nephew, John Graves, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

At his request, no funeral services were held. After cremation ashes were scattered at sea. The Mission Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family asks that any memorial contributions be given to the Monterey Peninsula Library, Monterey Institute for Research in Astronomy, MPMA (La Mirada), or the National Trust for Historic Preservation for Casa Amesti Fund through the Old Capital Club.

Allendar P. Ryan

Funeral services took place Oct. 27 at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea, for Allendar Paul Ryan of Pacific Grove, a semi-retired carpenter, who died Oct. 24 at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula. He was 77.

Christian Scientists set Thanksgiving special services

When Christian Scientists in Carmel join with friends and neighbors for Thanksgiving Day services this Thursday, Nov. 24, they'll be sharing gratefully what an understanding of God and His love has done for them, their families and their communities.

It's a tradition among Christian Science congregations to hold these special services each year for the community. This year the one-hour service at First Church of Christ, Scientist at Monte Verde at Sixth will begin at 10 a.m.

A large portion of the Thaksgiving Day service will be devoted to spontaneous sharing from the congregation. These services have always been a time when Christian Scientists may tell of their gratitude to God for present-day spiritual healing in their own experience. Christian Science teaching reflects Jesus' promise in the Bible: "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also..."

The church service will include hymns, prayer and readings from the Bible and from the denominational textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, by church founder Mary Baker Eddy.

Care for children too young to attend the service will be available.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

A Thanksgiving Poem

Carmel Pine Cone
Nov. 24, 1983

Each year when it comes Thanksgiving
I try to think of another way
To give a worthy "Thank You"
on this, America's special day

What is an adequate thank you
For a blossom, a moonbeam, the dew
A thought, a feeling
That becomes a part of You?

And what about our hopes and dreams
A longed-for wish come true?
And those ever-precious intangibles
Like love and caring too?

Lord, I've found a way to say "thank you"
For things so diverse and apart
I'll gather them all together
As I offer up my heart.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

It's time to retire a myth about retirement, according to David Eckerdt, Ph.D., of Boston University's School of Public Health. There is not real evidence to support the myth that retirement shortens life, said Dr. Eckerdt. His research on the subject appeared in the journal The Gerontologist. Some people wrongly assume that retirement triggers ill health because they knew someone who died soon after retiring. But "it has not been established that such cases are more than rare events," Dr. Eckerdt said. His research indicates that deteriorating health "is likely to be a continuation of pre-retirement illness."

ONCOLOGY CARE MEETS SPECIAL NEEDS

Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula has added to its staff two experts in the field of oncology (the medical science related to cancer), whose special training enhances the level of care available in both the home care and inpatient programs.

Hospice provides care for patients with any life-threatening illness, but most patients who receive care from Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula are dealing with a cancer diagnosis.

Cancer patients' needs are intricate and complicated throughout the course of disease. Pain control and symptom management are important elements of the care plan which takes quality of life as its goal.

Donna Fritz, oncology clinical specialist, received her bachelor's degree nursing at Loma Linda University School of Nursing, and her master's in nursing at UCLA. Donna's past experience at the Loma Linda University Medical Center includes head nurse, Medical Oncology-Hematology Unit; nursing research and documentation; and nursing staff development. Donna is a member of the Oncology Nursing Society, the Central Coast Oncology Nurses Interest Group, The International Society of Nurses in Cancer Care and the Hospice Nurses Association. She is the author of numerous publications and has worked as a volunteer with the American Cancer Society.

Julie Bryan, pediatric oncology clinical specialist, received her bachelor's degree in nursing from University of Pennsylvania and her master of science degree in nursing with a focus on pediatric oncology from University of California, San Francisco. She came to Hospice from the Natividad Medical Center in Salinas where she worked in the Nursing Education Department. Before moving to California, she worked at the Scottish Rite Children's Hospital in Atlanta as a Pediatric Oncology Clinical Nurse Specialist. There she developed standards of care for children with cancer, nursing protocols, and educational materials. She worked as a consultant to teachers and parents, developing support and bereavement groups. She offers extensive experience in nursing care to pediatric oncology patients.

Bryan is a member of the Association of Pediatric Oncology Nurses, Oncology Nursing Society and Children's Hospice International.

With the special Thanksgiving dinners being prepared for Thursday, November 24, The SPCA of Monterey County, A Humane Society, reminds all pet owners to be cautious in overfeeding animals during this time of the year. No matter how cute the begging, resist the temptation to indulge your pet with holiday goodies. A sudden change in diet can cause intestinal problems that both you and your pet will regret. Above all, make Thanksgiving a safe and happy day for everyone, including the family pet by remembering that turkey bones can splinter and pierce your pet's internal organs, causing serious damage or even death. Don't endanger your pet's life by giving him or her turkey bones. You may indulge in the overeating, but let yor pet continue his or her daily eating routine. You'll both be the happier for it.

The SPCA of Monterey County, a Humane Society, and The Carmel Pine/Pacific Grove Monarch as well as the merchants on this page present this feature.

Bazaar weekend dawns on Monterey Peninsula

By ANNE PAPINEAU

A SIGN MORE certain than rainfall that autumn has arrived on the Monterey Peninsula is the annual blossoming of gift bazaars. These events are designed to stock holiday larders and surround Christmas trees chin-deep in gifts.

Bazaar week is upon us. Beating out Thanksgiving by a good six days, this wealth of bazaars challenges shoppers to visit more than a half-dozen peninsula venues for a bounty of selections. Between Friday, Nov. 18, and Sunday, Nov. 20, the dedicated bazaar browsers can attend functions at Monterey Peninsula College, the Monterey Elks Lodge, Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula, and other points around the peninsula. A round-up of bazaars is listed at the close of this story.

Probably the largest bazaar of them all is the Homecrafters' Marketplace. In its 18th year, Homecrafters' is scheduled to run 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 19 at Sunset Center in Carmel. Sunday, Nov. 20 will be the date in case of rain.

Some 97 booths are expected to be open at Homecrafters' Marketplace this year. Each of the exhibitors is first screened by a seven-member panel whose members are versed in quality craftsmanship. This year the screening took place in September.

"It's really not easy to get in," explains Joan Vandervort, coordinator for the annual gift show. "We had to turn away 75 people this year."

The marketplace observes lofty quality standards.

"We're very strong on people making their own things, starting from the ground up," Vandervort added. "We like to see people start with a block of wood rather than buying a manufactured item and putting a bow on it. And none of the items can already be carried in any stores in Carmel proper."

Drawing from around the Monterey Peninsula, the 1988 installment of Homecrafters' Marketplace will feature handmade quilts designed to fit beds from infants' cribs to king-size, herb wreathes, handmade bears, silk-screened wine bags, handwoven baskets and more — a wealth of art and crafts too numerous to list.

"We'll take in the whole parking lot from Ninth through 10th streets plus the lower level of 10th and Mission at Sunset Center," the coordinator said. Sunset Center is located in downtown Carmel on San Carlos Street at Ninth Avenue.

Annie Keresey of Carmel Valley balanced producing handpainted sweatshirts and T-shirts for the marketplace with raising her four children, ages 14 months to 10 years.

"It really is a well put-together show," she said.

1988 marks Keresey's second year of participation in the marketplace, where she will display a profusion of handpainted clothing that is "completely washable. There's no hassle taking them to the dry cleaners or anything. I use some festive handmade lace and ribbon roses — plus shirts with a lot of painting on them. Some are specifically for Christmas and some are for all-year 'round."

New this year to Homecrafters' Marketplace is Billie Arnold and her "medicine hoops." Inspired by the rawhide "medicine shields" that Plains Indians used in their ceremonies, Arnold makes hoops from willow branches. She then stretches soft suede over the branches, and decorates each with an individual design.

"I've always been interested in Indian cultures all over the country," noted the Carmel Valley resident, who works as a style editor at CTB McGraw Hill. "I made one of these as a housewarming gift, and it was such a positive thing that I made more."

Arnold decorates the hoops with both traditional Native American motifs as well as ideas of her own. Some hoops have pockets that hold a crystal, some are draped with beads, feathers or shells found on the beach.

Beginning her third season with Homecrafters' Marketplace is sculptor Suzanne Sable, who is a member of the Carmel Art Association.

Sable's voice is still redolent of her native Paris. For this year's show she will display both her signature bronze sculptures as well as "little people" formed of driftwood and clay.

"It's a very good show," Sable states.

Also entering her third year at the Carmel sale is Emily Owens of Pacific Grove. She has designed wholly new plush beings for Homecrafters' Marketplace, since a line of her "creatures and wild things" is already available for purchase in Carmel gift shops.

"I started out when my children were born to make dolls and toys for Christmas, and presents for birthday parties," explains Owens. "Now it's almost a full-time business."

Her daughters Kate and Anna demonstrate Owens' "princess dolls," child-size plush dolls, elegantly gowned, that have elastic at the feet and hands so that children can literally dance with them.

"I also have a dancing cat, some wild creatures and my 'flame-headed' dolls," Owens added, gesturing to a couch stacked with the zany beings.

The Homecrafters' Marketplace is just one of the bazaars set around the Monterey Peninsula this BILLIE ARNOLD of Carmel Valley designed and made a diverse collection of medicine hoops, inspired by medicine shields carried by Plains Indians. Her designs, crafted of suede, boast individual decorations, such as crystals, feathers and seashells.

SUZANNE SABLE, a member of the Carmel Art Association since 1978, brings her signature bronze sculptures and driftwood and clay figures to the 1988 Homecrafters' Marketplace. Sale hours are 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 19 at Sunset Center. Several other crafts shows and sales are set this weekend. Homecrafters' Marketplace will take place Sunday, Nov. 20 in the event of rain on Saturday.

ANNIE KERESEY describes 14-month-old daughter Claire as "the inspiration of my angels." Angels, Christmas trees and other holiday motifs decorate the clothing she made for the annual Homecrafters' Marketplace at Sunset Center in Carmel. (Photographs by Anne Papineau'.

EMILY OWENS' Pacific Grove home is alive with the whimsical "creatures and wild things" she readied for Saturday's sale at Sunset Center. Owens' dancing cats and princess dolls can be attached to children's hands and feet as a dancing partner.

Writers' Jamboree draws literary lights

By MAC McDONALD

PACIFIC GROVE author Ray Mungo and his crew — who are fast becoming the Monterey Peninsula's version of the Merry Pranksters — are at it again.

This time they've enlisted the aid of that mavin of manners, that expert on etiquette, Judith Martin, known to millions of newspaper readers as "Miss Manners," for the Third Annual Writers' Jamboree presented by Creative State Quarterly Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 19-20.

Past Jambos (as veterans of the events now call them), have included such celebrated authors as Tom Robbins, Armistead Maupin and Jessica Mitford as well as numerous workshops, seminars, and — of course — the requisite parties, in which writers and would-be writers rub shoulders and sip wine with the literary cognoscenti, the famous and the near-famous.

This year's event features more of the same, only bigger and better it seems.

Thus far there are four seminars, four workshops, a Writers' Jamboree Ball, two special writers' luncheons and a gourmet lunch with Miss Manners planned.

The special events include a gourmet lunch set for noon to 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 19 at the Highlands Inn that includes a question-and-answer period with Miss Manners, and a "Spies and Counterspies"-themed Writers' Jamboree Ball later that evening at 8 at the Monterey Plaza Hotel that will involve party guests in a spy thriller occuring in their midst.

And since, as their slogan proclaims, this is a event "Promoting the literary arts of Monterey County," there will be four seminars on Nov. 19, "Writing for Love and Money 101 (Central Coast Market)," from 9 to 11 a.m.; "Writing for Love and Money 102 (California Market)," fro, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.; "Lit Biz 101, How to Get Happily, Successfully Published," from 2 to 4 p.m.; and "Lit Biz 102, the National Book Market," from 4 to 6 p.m., all at La Playa Hotel in Carmel.

Workshops on Sunday, Nov. 20 include: "Literary Agents' Workshop," 10 a.m. to noon; "Wine Writers' Workshop," also 10 a.m. to noon; "Screenwriters' Workshop," and "Mystery and Crime Writers' Workshop," both from 1 to 3 p.m., all at The Barnyard.

The panelists for both the seminars and workshops include a variety of local, regional and national editors, novelists, columnists, screenwriters, freelance writers, and literary agents, including those from The Los Angeles Times, Mother Jones, New York Times Book Review, USA Today, San Francisco Chronicle, and San Francisco Focus.

Among the names are Patricia Holt, book editor for the Chronicle; Robert Wilson, book editor for USA Today; Susan Brenneman, senior editor of Los Angeles Times Magazine; Amanda Spake, senior editor, The Washington Post Magazine; mystery writers Robert Irvine and Robert Campbell, winner of the 1987 Edgar Award for best mystery writing; and screenwriters Alan Marcus and Madeline DiMaggio, who has written teleplays for Hart to Hart, Kojak and Bob Newhart Show, among others.

A literary theme drama, "Spies and Counterspies" will be played out among partygoers and will feature local actors, including Carl Christ, Keith Decker, Jim Jensen, Diane Rowe, Barbara Rose Shuler and Jean Thurman, and directed by Chuck Thurman, former manager of the Wharf Theater. In it, "former vice president Hart Quaylebent" will be on hand to autograph copies of his novel without realizing his life is in danger.

Tickets at $35 each include butler dining, complimentary wines offered by the Monterey Wine Country Associates, and dancing to the Writers' Jamboree Band.

The gourmet lunch with Miss Manners, co-sponsored by The Monterey Vineyard, includes lunch, premium wines and question-and-answer session with Miss Manners. Tickets are $100 each and are limited.

Seminar costs are $20 in advance for each seminar or $25 at the door, if available; workshops, $40 in advance, $50 at the door.

Tickets are available at Center Stage Ticketing, 649-5561, or at the door if not sold out. For more information on the two-day event, call 647-8086.

JUDITH MARTIN, better known to the readers of her popular syndicated column as "Miss Manners," will appear at a special gourmet luncheon at Highlands Inn on Saturday, Nov. 19 at the Third Annual Writers' Jamboree, set for Nov. 19-20.

Chutneys chef autographs his new cookbook

Fuad Bahou, owner and chef of Chutneys Gourmet Cafe in the Crossroads, Carmel, will autograph copies of his new cookbook, A Different Flavor from Chutneys Kitchen. The booksigning and reception, which will feature hors d'oeuvres by Bahou, will take place 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 20 at Blake's Bookshop, 238 Crossroads Blvd. in Carmel.

The book includes more than 200 recipes, ranging from basic to exotic, taking the reader from the appetizer to dessert and coffee finale. Recipes include a number of Chutneys famous homemade soups, chutneys sauces, vegetarian as well as meat entrees, and seafood.

Bahou's dishes reflect his attitude toward cooking as an artform, and the medium of food as a vehicle of that expression. His style of cooking is spontaneous and eclectic and is directly related to the many tastes and flavors experienced during his extensive travels.

Cooking, for Bahou means imagination blended with wit, good nature, love of people, a copper skillet finely seasoned, experience, and artistic sensibility.

Bring a friend to Blake's Bookshop, 238 Crossroads Blvd in the Crossroads Shopping Center in Carmel.

MUSIC CORNER

By Jo Ann La Torra

Two performances occupy concert-goers

TWO INTERESTING concerts occupied concert-goers last week — the Buswell-Parnas-Luvisi Trio on Monday, Nov. 7 at Sunset Theater, and the Monterey County Symphony on Sunday, Nov. 13 at King Hall in Monterey.

Those of us who were disappointed with the first offering from the Chamber Music Society were repaid handsomely for our forbearance by the B-P-L Trio. The well-balanced program of Beethoven, Brahms and Leon Kirchner was intelligently, sensitively and fluently played.

Beethoven's Piano Trio, Op. 1, No. 2, opened the program. The three trios of Opus 1 were Beethoven's first published music, not the first he wrote. With these trios, however, he felt secure enough to go into print. Each has its charms and the only real weakness in them is that they are a bit "wordy." Beethoven was still a young man, and it took him a while to get his point across. Of the three, No. 3 in C minor, has proved to be the most durable.

Therefore, it was a special treat to hear No. 2, in G major. The Trio gave it a graceful, stylistically solid, reading. The fast movements were clear and crisp, the slow movement was quiet and peaceful. My only, very minor, complaint was that I thought they were a bit sober in the opening Allegro vivace, where it might have been played for more humor. But that is also a personal preference, and in no way detracted from pleasure.

It is always a red letter day here when we are treated to music of our own, quickly waning, century. Leon Kirchner, a Pulitzer prize-winner and certainly one of our more important composers, wrote this Trio in 1954, so it isn't exactly new. It is original, but not unconventional. The harmonic idiom is both chromatic and dissonant, but there are no extended instrumental techniques in the manner of George Crumb. It is a powerful work, with free, recitative-like string passages alternating with rhythmatically active passages that usually involve the piano. It builds to a tremendous climax as the rhythmic patterns take on a march-like character. One couldn't possibly understand the piece adequately on first hearing (any more than Beethoven's audiences understood his music on first hearing), but the impression was very favorable.

After intermission, cellist Parnas retired, and Buswell and Luvisi were joined by Hermann Baumann on the French Horn for a performance of Brahms' lovely Trio, Op. 40, which dates from 1865. It was a beautiful performance, exhibiting as careful attention to the late Romantic style as the Trio had earlier shown with the Classical Beethoven. Baumann's tone is open and sweet, perfect for this work.

The ensemble was good, as might be surmised; more striking was the match of tone between violin and cello. Most ensembles strive for blend, although some value individuality. The blend here was extraordinary.

CLARK SUTTLE led the Symphony in a program of Debussy, Ravel and Shostakovich. Although the Shostakovich symphony was written 50 years after the other two works, more or less, its style is so conservative that we almost might have been hearing three works of the same decade. It provided interesting insights into the French and Russian styles.

Two of Debussy's Nocturnes, "Nuages" and "Fetes" opened the program. They exemplify the Impressionist style with washes of color and emphasis on atmosphere. "Nuages" showed excellent control at the beginning, which can be tricky. "Fetes" was likewise well-controlled, from the tense excitement of the rhythmic patterns to the distant trumpets. The big crescendo might have happened a bit fast, but it was generally good.

Revel's popular Introduction and Allegro for a septet of harp, string quartet, flute and clarinet, was the vehicle for the former harpist of the symphony, Patty Masri-Fletcher. Although Ravel is constantly coupled with Debussy, and labelled an Impressionist, he tended to think in clear, abstract, classical terms. In performance, then, one looks for sharper lines and more clearly delineated sections.

Suttle chose to conduct the work, not unheard of in chamber music with this many players. The result, however, was the players continued to be orchestra players, responding to the conductor instead of to one another, as in chamber music. It was not a bad performance, it just didn't show this piece in its best light.

The Tenth Symphony of Shostakovich occupied the second half of the program. Dating from 1953, this work was written in the year of Stalin's death, and is supposed to illustrate Shostakovich's feelings about his relationships to Stalin. (Shostakovich had been publicly scolded for writing decadent Western music, and evidently had a rough time of it for a while. Unlike some of his colleagues, he chose to stay in Russia and was not vocal about his feelings. This was, no doubt, judicious, but it meant he incurred wrath from the other side as well.)

This moody work is very long and very repetitive, but it has its exciting moments. After a brooding opening, the first movement arrives at a harsh climax. But not just once. There is an even larger climax coming. The second movement is more effective, partly because it is shorter and makes its point more efficiently. It is fast, frenetic and angry. The third movement is colorful; the finale, an Andante/Allegro, could almost stand on its own, without the rest of the symphony.

The performance was a bit rough, but quite creditable for the first time out.

It was an ambitious concert, it did not fall far short, and one must be grateful for the gentle introduction to the 20th century.

Vanity license plates make thoughtful gifts

Searching for a thoughtful but inexpensive holiday gift? The California Department of Motor Vehicles suggests a personalized license plate.

DMV's Environmental License Plate (ELP) program allows anyone to order a personalized license plate as a gift for a friend or relative. The plates usually take about six to eight weeks to process and deliver, so DMV advises that they should be ordered now. Or a gift certificate can be purchased and recipients can create their own personalized messages.

Imagination is the only limit to this gift idea. Some plates which follow traditional yuletide themes—PEACE, JOY, LOVE—already have been taken, but many more are available. Using letters and numbers, up to a maximum of seven, many plate-holders express their hobby or profession with combinations such as 2THDOK, IMACPA, 4D9RFAN and H2OSKI.

The license plates cost $36 in addition to regular registration charges and an extra $20 each time the motor vehicle registration is renewed. For those who have everything, including a set of personalized plates, a third plate for display only may be ordered for home or office at a one-time charge of $35.

The extra fees paid might also be considered a holiday gift to the environment as they help support a variety of California environmental programs ranging from wildlife habitat protection to reseeding fire-ravaged lands.

Forest Theater will stage musicals, O'Neill drama in '89

A MOON for the misbegotton, a drama by Eugene O'Neill, will be the first presentation of the 1989 summer season in Carmel's Outdoor Forest Theater, according to the Guild President Susan Resendez. It is a story believed to be the fictional counterpart of O'Neill's elder brother. Director Cole Weston is making plans for January auditions.

Two musicals representing life in the late 1800s in the far west and the midwest will follow Misbegotten.

Seven Brides for Seven Brothers, based on Stephen Vincent Benet's The Sobbin Women, screenplay by Albert Hackett, will be directed by Larry Ayo. Musical lyrics by Johnny Mercer, music by Gene de Paul among the best known, "Goin Co'tin' " and "Spring, Spring, Spring".

The second musical will be the oft-revived Show Boat, from the novel by Edna Ferber, book and lyrics by Oscar Hammerstein II, music by Jerome Kern. To be directed by Hamish Tyler, Show Boat will require a cast of approximately 19 women, and 5 men, featuring such familiar musical numbers as, "Ol' Man River", "Why Do I Love You," and "Only Make Believe". The show was originally produced by Florenz Ziegfield in 1927.

The Forest Theater was started by Herbert Heron in 1910 and was the first open air theater in California. It was established as a self-supporting community enterprise with members promoting, photographing, directing, acting and writing the whole show with no salaries even considered. Approximately 121 different plays have been staged and produced since the first show in 1911.

BAY LIGHTS

By Ray Mungo

Down by the Riverside

MISS MANNERS is coming, Miss Manners is coming and quick, which fork is for salad? She'll preside over the party this Saturday night (Nov. 19) as the 3rd annual Writers' Jamboree rocks the Monterey Plaza Hotel from eight to nidnight. Wines are by the 16 member wineries of the Monterey Wine Country Associates, food is butlered hors d'oeuvre, the theme play is "Spies vs. Counterspies" with the guests searching for clues, and jazz music will be provided by the Writers' Jamboree Band featuring William Minor on piano, Jim Houston on bass andJonathan Drake on drums. Tix at $35 include food, wine, entertainment and dancing and are at Center Stage in Monterey, Book Works in PG and the Thunderbird bookshop in the Barnyard and see ya there...

THE NEW River Inn in Big Sur has been attracting a lot of comment and compliments since it opened under new management six months ago. Herb and Tara Evans, who had the Cafe Central and Alice's in Westwood, L.A., are in partnership with Nancy Sanders and Alan Perlmutter, longtime Big Sur folk, and the place has been spiffed up quite pleasantly. Natural redwood complements the airy openness of the dining room, and the old bar has been ripped out and replaced by a blonder, mellower one in the back.

The baby back ribs cooked over wood smoke are the item of choice on the River Inn's ambitious menu which ranges from hamburgers to New York steak and prawns. These ribs were something to remember, falling off the bone and tenderly succulent. Our companion tried the calamari and fries and pronounced them the best he'd eaten in the area. All was nicely paired with a house 1987 Clos du Bois Chardonnay. Chef Tara Evans takes pride in her kitchen and especially in her apple pie, so we had to indulge ourselves in some and*yummm*. In olden days this place was called the Apple Pie Inn.

Most of the lunch and dinner entrees are safely under $10, and they're offering a full Thanksgiving day dinner with turkey or Cornish hen and all fixings for $10.95 ($7.95 for kids), noon to late. They also feature a 10 per cent discount for Monterey Peninsula residents, open poetry reading Tuesday nights, pasta specials Wednesdays and Jake Stock and the Abalone Stompers on Sunday afternoons.

Also new at the River Inn is the Heart Beat of Big Sur gift shop wisely managed and stocked by Theresa Bradford, who spent nine years as purchaser for Nepenthe's Phoenix shop. It's a gorgeous, trendy, incense-perfumed universe of different things.

Our 1972 Ford Maverick refused to start, almost as if we didn't really want to leave this place, but a search through nearby canyons produced burly, bearded Michael Mahoney who correctly determined the starter connection was loose, tightened it, and vroom, vroom, Bay Lights was on the road again...

ALL THE way clear up to San Jose, where we did a reading for the San Jose Poetry Center in the Phoenix Bookshop, a croissants-and-Faulkner gathering spot for the collegiate set. Something is stirring up there, "San Jose is Growing Up" is the theme. Dinner at the Victorian Garden Restaurant affected a kind of Continental elegance at prices much lower than Carmel's equivalent places, and the top floor of the skyscraping new Holiday Inn at Park Center Plaza runs about $58 a room, not bad.

We ran into publisher Joe Sanchez, proud of the second edition of his art and literature magazine Stray (sample issue $3 from 448 S. Market St., San Jose 95113) and poet Alan Soldofsky who by some genius manages to find grants and salaries for artists out of the coffers of generous San Jose businesses and patrons. They're trying their best to catch up to Frisco, maybe even create a new style...

SIDE ORDERS: The wedding of the season last Saturday saw Suzanne Rivera tie the knot with Vince Rhoades at the old San Carlos Mission in Monterey, then lead a caravan in an open 1923 Rolls Royce convertible, dozens of cars honking madly through the Monterey tunnel and around town. Somewhere in Pebble Beach, we lost the cars ahead of us and found ourselves leading a parade of confused out-of-town guests around 17 Mile Drive but all ended happily as we found the La Playa Hotel and the ensuing grand Mexican feast with mariachi band...

"A TASTY Affair" to benefit KAZU-FM, 90.3, our dynamite local public radio station, was all of that and more at the Monterey Plaza. Once again this event packed 'em in for wines from 25 wineries, foods from 15 top restaurants, dancing and catching up with old friends. Our top honors went to Jimmy's American Place and Robata for a great pairing of Japanese and American foods, sushi and shrimp, and to Domaine Chandon for pouring its special reserve. The affair continues next year, mais naturellement...

NEW ORLEANS came to Monterey two weeks ago when chef Dana Clark of the Louisiana Territory restaurant in Mountain View catered the Mardi Gras Masquerade Ball at the Sheraton to benefit the Monterey County AIDS Project. Spicy Cajun appetizers of barbequed oysters, oysters Rockefeller, popcorn shrimp and chicken strips whetted the appetites of costumed revelers and this kind of food is getting more and more popular. Ferdi's in Seaside does a good job with Louisiana cookin' but Cafe Orleans on Cannery Row just closed down. Heck of way to make a living, the restaurant biz...

Mort Leavitt of Carmel has a great idea for making a little extra money when the AT&T and other big events are in town. He's going to rent out his village 93921 post office box address...

IF WE survive the Writers' Jambo we promise to change our name and move to another town so tune in next week and see...

JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

Grounds for celebration

THANKSGIVING WEEK'S right around the corner. And local jazz people have ample grounds for celebration.

The cause and the site are the same. Monterey Bay club booked back-to-back songwrights whose materials and highly individual delivery thereof have lighted the national scene for decades.

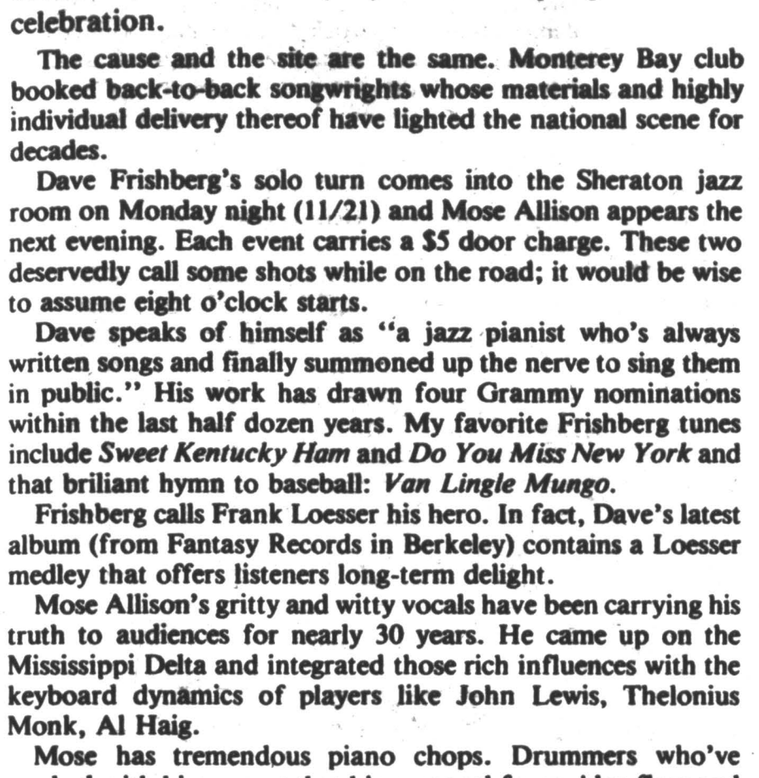
Dave Frishberg's solo turn comes into the Sheraton jazz room on Monday night (11/21) and Mose Allison appears the next evening. Each event carries a $5 door charge. These two deservedly call some shots while on the road; it would be wise to assume eight o'clock starts.

Dave speaks of himself as "a jazz pianist who's always written songs and finally summoned up the nerve to sing them in public." His work has drawn four Grammy nominations within the last half dozen years. My favorite Frishberg tunes include Sweet Kentucky Ham and Do You Miss New York and that briliant hymn to baseball: Van Lingle Mungo.

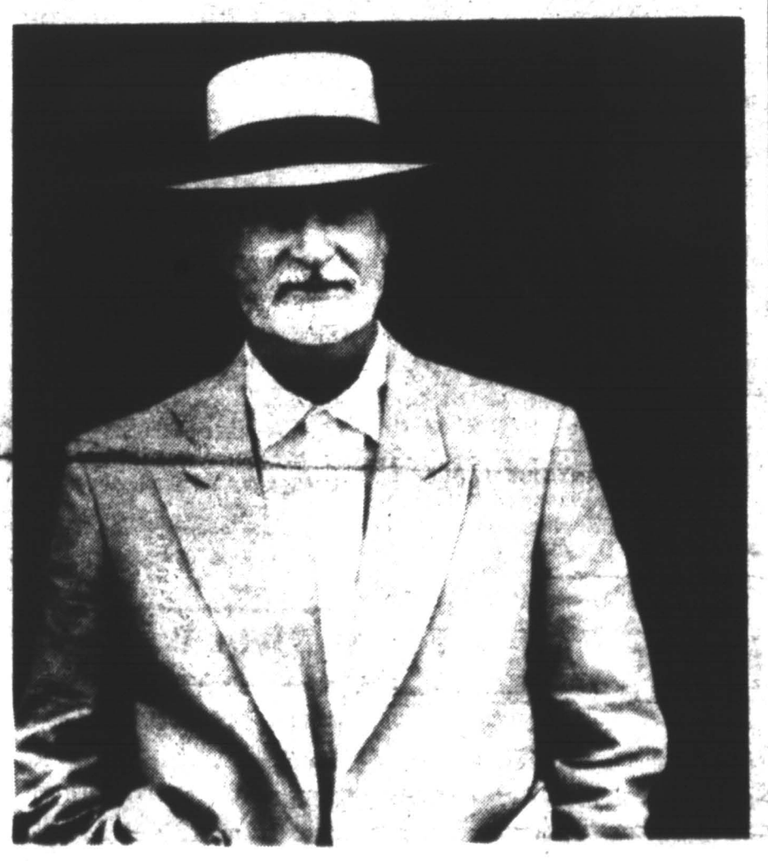
Frishberg calls Frank Loesser his hero. In fact, Dave's latest album (from Fantasy Records in Berkeley) contains a Loesser medley that offers listeners long-term delight.

Mose Allison's gritty and witty vocals have been carrying his truth to audiences for nearly 30 years. He came up on the Mississippi Delta and integrated those rich influences with the keyboard dynamics of players like John Lewis, Thelonius Monk, Al Haig.

Mose has tremendous piano chops. Drummers who've worked with him report that his personal force, idea flow and sheer instrumental speed put them right to the wall. Reasonably, then, he'll bring along his own bassist and drummer for the Bay Club gig.



COMING INTO AREA— David Frishberg and Mose Allison both will work the Sheraton's Monterey Bay Club within Thanksgiving Week. Dave's the one with glasses and bemused expression; Allison's latest album puts forth tunes that really are hip essays in miniature. See Jazz Tides for details.



(Personal note. Mose always was the favorite singer of my life's main ladylove—the late jazz vocalist Carol Mildon—and I know she'd be knocked out by Allison's recent Blue Note release. One tune talks about somebody seeing his unknown father in the morningtime mirror. It's a haunting gem—as if William Faulkner had come back with jazz composer's skills in that deep bag.)

Bay Club booker Teri Waros has learned her job well. On Thanksgiving Night (11/24) an excellent trio will dig in—the bassist-cellist Ruth Davies, conga master Babatunde, pianist Mark Little. Wednesday evening brings vocalist Lauri Hofer fronting the tight band called Little Big Fun.

Smith and Gail Dobson (11/17). Venusian Blonde (11/18). Tenorman Terry Hanck and the Soul Rockers (11/19). Superb pianist Bobby Phillips on Sunday evening (11/20). No cover costs anywhere—except for Dave and Mose.

ON MONDAY night (11/21) Kuumbwa Jazz Center in Santa Cruz has the young and much-praised British tenorman Courtney Pine. Costs $11 per head; eight o'clock kick. Reservations: 427-2227.

Meanwhile, Kuumbwa further pursues its new marketing program via announcement of some aid with compiling your holiday gift lists. The innovation—Jazztix.

These are vouchers redeemable (by advance registration) for any of next year's Monday night concerts. Recent guests in the major series—J.J. Johnson, Poncho Sanchez, Mal Waldron. You get the idea.

Each $40 booklet holds four Jazztix. "That's a saving of as much as one-third off regular ticket prices," says Development Director Judith Broadhurst.

Phone orders will be taken with VISA or MasterCard at 427-2227 as well as 427-2422. Mail order forms may be obtained at the non-profit Kuumbwa or through those same numbers. No limit on the number of sets bought between now and year's end.

Judith: "Jazztix orders will be mailed within 10 days of receipt of payment."

CABLE TELEVISION celebrates itself with the 10th annual programming awards in January. Home Box Office swept the recently-announced nominations.

On one hand, it was good to see the dramatic biography of South Africa's Nelson Mandela pull down eight nominations. The man deserves so much more than slow death in prison—and media pressure just may help him win freedom.

On another hand, Bravo Channel's extraordinary series on jazz artists received not a sniff or whisper. Well, maybe those shows always will resemble a favorite country inn—all the better for lack of wide and wild praise.

Let's call this our shiny secret, then. Bravo's available from MPTV as part of a package. The jazz segments normally run at seven o'clock on Friday nights. I don't have a television set, but so far a generous friend has let me watch fine hour-long shows about John Coltrane and Chet Baker and McCoy Tyner. Cecil Taylor's yet another deserving subject.

The various directors prefer performance footage. When interview material intercuts—as with the Chet treatment—comments point back to the music. Fortunately, segments repeat if you miss them the first time.

The Chet Baker hour centers on his 1986 booking at Ronnie Scott's famed jazz club in London. It's all the more moving since we know how his life ends months later—going out that window of an Amsterdam hotel.

Jarring seconds occur when Chet recalls boyhood years on the Oklahoma farm. After all he's been through, innocence rings under and all round those words. The lasting impression: innocence is stronger than drug addiction and the endless scuffle visited upon most jazz players.

Chet gets down. Asked why he labors in Europe so much, he says without anger that this nation's "pitifully low" level of culture works against jazz artists. There simply aren't enough venues, he adds, to support strictly stateside careers.

Back onstage at Ronnie Scott's. He's singing My Ideal. Close-up. Tears roll down Chet Baker's battered cheeks.

Powerful stuff. Proving that the purity of his trumpet and amazing ear never went away.

NOTEBOOK CHUNKS:

• Drummer Roland Allen sort of has become the hub round which Sunday afternoon sets happen at Portofino Coffee House in Pacific Grove Plaza. These usually run from 4:30-7:30; collection taken for the players.

Blues guitarist-vocalist Dale Miller will play the Portofino on Friday night (11/18). It's $4 per at the door; eight o'clock kick.

• The remaining Sunday nights in November will bring bright jazz to Jimmy's American Place (Carmel Rancho Center). Kenny Stahl packs in his flutes and starts the first set at eight.

• Much action this month for fine pianist Larry Vuckovich. His trio will work Kimball's in San Francisco (11/25-26). Then he'll be in Maybeck Recital Hall (Berkeley) for a Sunday afternoon concert (11/27) that starts at four. That evening, he'll be part of a "piano summit" with Smith Dobson and the Russian Andre Kitaev at San Jose's Garden City Club.

• O.T. Price's Music Hall in Soquel has a Cajun and Zydeco Dance planned for Friday night (11/18). Bands: Sun Dogs and Bad Boys. Cover of $3 per. On Wednesday night (11/23)—Chicago Blues Party with Lonnie Mack and friends. Showtime at 8:30; $4 cover.

• Ramsey Lewis and knockout jazz vocalist Marlena Shaw are at the San Francisco Fairmont's Venetian Room (through 11/20).

How to recognize a quack when you see one.

Quack medical products. They're everything from baldness remedies to cancer cures. All eventually prove to be a waste of money; many actually pose a serious threat to your health.

How do you distinguish a quack medical product from the real thing? For a start—if it sounds too good to be true, it probably is. Quack medical products usually claim simple solutions, miracle cures, or amazing scientific breakthroughs. Many flaunt testimonials from satisfied users. To be sure whether a medical product is a quack, check with your doctor or pharmacist first. Because the next dead duck could be you.

Ronda Road Retreat

If we were starting from scratch to name a street, we'd think "Ronda Road" an inspired choice. Especially if it turned out to look like this Ronda Road in Pebble Beach, and the houses along it were as attractive as this one.

Take Oleada to Ronda and swing in at the 4th driveway on the left. This mounts up a slight rise, brings you to a sizeable parking plaza, and delivers you to a short, geranium lined bridge that leads to the entrance. Below you is one of several patios. To your left are broad views of the forest and the ocean.

The exterior is shingles with black frames on doors and windows. The roof is steeply pitched away from you, and a long wing extends to the right.

The interior is panelled in all heart redwood. The living room rises to a cathedral ceiling with twin black beams supported by giant poles which reach to the ground. Floors are oak, there are windows all about, and a towering chimney breast that looks like slate (but is steel).

To the right is the panelled dining room, and beyond it the fascinating kitchen and family room. But wait...

Go straight ahead instead through a vaulted hall to the two main floor bedrooms. On the left is the blue bedroom, with shuttered windows facing the sea, and a satisfying bath with double sinks, triple mirrors, glassed-in tub and shower and a private commode. (We like private commodes.)

The master suite on the right is so large a queen-size bed set at an angle looks like a postage stamp. More shuttered windows and a bath-and-a-half that requires a tour guide. There are 3 sinks, white tiled floor, skylights, private shower and tub, and the ever popular private commode.

Let's go back to the kitchen. It too is panelled in redwood, has a vaulted roof, Mexican tile floor, and an intimate conversational nook at the far end. This centers about a fireplace faced with Portuguese (blue) tile, has sunken lights in its beamed ceiling, and becomes the end point of every party. The kitchen itself has every convenience, including a cleverly concealed wall barbecue and a hidden pantry. There's a protected patio just outside with colonnades, arbored top and various levels of redwood decking.

The lower level has 2 more sizeable bedrooms, a wonderful bathroom, many more closets and cabinets to supplement those upstairs, and very large storage rooms. This area deserves an ad of its own, but it will have to wait till next week. Unless it's sold in the meantime. $895,000. Oh, in the Nuts & Bolts Dept., the lot is a little over an acre. And the house is 3200 sq ft.
